

Meyer appointment gains strong support

by STUART GIBSON

The appointment of McGill law professor Perry Meyer to conduct the probe into the Loyola crisis, officially confirmed last night, has received strong endorsement from both faculty and students at the College.

PERRY MEYER

Good news

Apparently Professor Meyer's name had been suggested by Deputy Education minister Yves Martin in a meeting with the Executive Committee of the Loyola Faculty Association last Monday. At that time Kalman Krakel, professor of engineering and Vice-President of the Executive Committee, stated that he would have no objections to the appointment of Professor Meyer.

Brian Mulroney, the lawyer who is representing the 31 professors who have been dismissed, said yesterday that he was "well-pleased" with the Meyer appointment.

Mr. Mulroney noted that Meyer would be a "thoroughly impartial arbitrator". He added that the McGill professor would provide an "independent assessment of the situation".

Loyola of Montreal Students' Association president Paul Aitken said that he would have no objection to the appointment of Prof. Meyer so long as the latter could "ensure the trust of every side" in the Loyola dispute. Aitken also said that the "terms of reference" of the commission should be "the resolution of the non-renewal of contracts" and that it should go "no further than that."

Meanwhile the LMSA issued an official communique in which the association "strongly supports" the government-appointed commission. The Association also appealed to all members of the Loyola community "to hold a moratorium on any further protest or disruption pending the results of the government inquiry."

Classes at Loyola are scheduled to recommence next Monday.

CEGEP will operate at Macdonald in '70

by SEYMOUR KAUFMAN

Senate yesterday approved a one-generation College Equivalent Programme to be established at Macdonald College for about 700 students in September, 1970, and to be maintained for at least two years.

The "emergency and temporary measure designed to alleviate the shortage of post-Grade 11 places in 1970" was put forth in an interim report presented by the Senate's Special Committee on CEGEP and Related Problems. Vice-Principal (Professional Affairs) Stanley Frost, who moved the proposal, stated that some 2,900 students would not be able to continue their education because of the shortage of space in the CEGEPs already in operation.

"McGill may not be able to meet the whole crisis but McGill would be better able to start a program next fall than a body not yet created for this purpose. We should show our sense of the urgency of the situation," said Frost.

The plan, to be run independently from the Montreal campus CEGEP program, called for 40 professors to be hired for the two-year period that the program would be in operation. 500 students would enroll in a new arts stream and 200 would follow a program in physical and biological sciences.

Faculty members of Senate, well aware of the shortage of funds available for hiring much needed staff on the Montreal campus, were skeptical of the feasibility of the plan. John Trentman, Arts and Science Vice Dean, wanted assurances that the money to pay the new staff would not be obtained at the expense of funds available for hiring new Montreal staff.

Robert Vogel, professor of history, questioned where McGill would find the funds to set up the program if the Quebec Government itself had said no money was available to establish a West Island CEGEP.

Senate also passed a recommendation by the University Admissions Committee to "admit as many fully-qualified Canadian applicants as possible into the First Collegial Year". Previously a ceiling of 1,350 students was placed on 1970 enrollments into E1 on the Montreal campus.

Also approved were new guidelines for the admission of Canadian Senior Matriculants and Non-Canadian Students. Senior Matriculants will not be admitted only into E-2. Previously they had been able to complete their degree requirements in three years.

Most American students will be admitted into E-1 but those with high qualifications would be allowed into E-2. Highly qualified foreign students from outside North America would "normally" be allowed into U-1.

Grey throne speech emphasizes finances

by BETTY PALIK

Senior Staff Reporter

1970 promises to be a year of blood, sweat and tears for the newly elected student councillors. Julius Grey, President of the Students' Society, outlined a seven point program last night that "must be dealt with" this term by Council.

Impending bankruptcy, secession threats, resignations, boycotts, personal feuds and constitutional problems hounded last year's councillors like the Greek Furies.

Finance and financial planning will be the main occupants of the 1970 Council floor. Kevin O'Connell, Graduate representative and the newly appointed Finance Director, emphasized the fact that the Students' Society was operating on a deficit and heading for bankruptcy.

He suggested that budgets be approved by Council at the beginning of the year instead of piecemeal, and that limits be set in certain areas of expenditures at the start. He urged the councillors to personally review financial statements with him before they will be called upon next week to approve them.

Grey called attention to the new University Discipline Code, which also will be Council's major work. The Senate Discipline Committee has compounded the code and this will be released in 10 days. The councillors must go through the code and adopt what is acceptable.

The third crucial business will be the CEGEP dilemma. Martin Shapiro, External Vice-President, warned that many foreign students will be discouraged from applying to McGill because the CEGEP programme will impose an extra year of study on them. Grey also pointed out that there are not enough university places for thousands of CEGEP graduates.

7 point program

Concerning the new constitution, which was not approved by Senate in December, Grey said that legal opinion had been sought and that there is no way that the constitution can be adopted unilaterally.

Grey declared that Council "must work on amendments to the constitution so that it can be presented to the student body as a referendum March 5."

Fees deadline

Today is the last day for payment of tuition fees. There will be a $25 fine for late fees that will only be ignored if there is a valid reason.

Solin acquiesces

Hoffman, August return from exile

by ED CHOUKE

Arnold August and Eric Hoffman continued spreading anti-Chaudhuri literature on campus yesterday in violation of an administrative suspension barring them from McGill.

Although the Dean of Students, C. D. Solin, was aware of their presence, he took no action against them. He suspended them last week pending a disciplinary hearing for allegedly beating up Stephen Wohl in the Union.

Senate formed the disciplinary committee yesterday of four student senators and four other senators picked at random. The two accused refuse to recognize the legitimacy of this committee, calling it a "hangman's crew".

August claims to have the support of at least 14 professors, including four on the McGill Faculty Union.

The President of the MFU, Sydney Ingeman, while remaining neutral, reported that the issues of the duo's suspension and the anti-Chaudhuri effort are on the MFU's agenda for Friday's meeting.

The faculty members on the disciplinary committee are: J. C. Beck, Director of the University Clinic, H. J. Maitre, assistant professor of German, M. L. Goldschmid, assistant professor of Psychology, and Sven Orvig, professor of Meteorology and chairman of the committee.

The four students are: Peter Chinloy, Alain Journet, Chris Portner, and Shelly Ungar.

Ungar said that he would remain on the committee only because his presence would make the committee more balanced. In his opinion, it is not the university's position to start legal proceedings especially since there is a municipal trial starting Jan. 30.

Fee school

It's January 15th again and one of the two points in the year when we all have to cough up half of our tuition fees (unless you had enough confidence to pay it all at once) and an appropriate time to consider the merits of our pay-as-you-go higher education.

One of the cardinal tenets of Chamber of Commerce postprandial philosophy is that people don't appreciate (or deserve) what they don't pay for. Indeed, a survey of more than 5000 university trustees (Saturday Review, January 10) showed that 92% strongly believed that education was a privilege and not a right. This is feudalistic nonsense.

Privilege for whom? "The top 6% of income earners provide 25% of university entrants and the bottom 25% of income earners provide only 8%". (Canadian Dimension, January 1970).

To be sure, McGill is not a 19th century Eton or an Oxford training the upper class to be Palmerstons. Like most North American universities it has become a middle class institution, but no more.

We know that most students get free rides right through, and for no other reason other than that their Daddy makes (or inherited) heavy bread. There are thousands whose family background virtually precludes the chance for higher education.

Not all are kept out, of course. It doesn't take a Marcuse to see that the big boys are not stupid. The cream of the (lower class) crop is welcomed and actively recruited to academia's hallowed halls, and the reasons are clear: (a) Infusing new blood into the educated elite helps prevent its stagnation (and adds incentive to those already in it but in danger of being replaced by the up and coming); (b) integrating (co-opting, if you will) the brightest of the poor into the mainstream, deprives the 'underprivileged' of their natural leaders (leaving of course middle class Lenins and Rudds to pick up the banner); and (c) allowing the very best of the poor to make it, perpetuates the myth of an upwardly mobile society in which anyone who wants to succeed and has the ability, can.

Nevertheless the fee structure makes it hard on even those few of the poor who do make it to university. The loan and bursary system is erratic and inadequate. The poor who do get loans are stuck with the "morally edifying" burden of being in debt from the minute they step out of school. (No post-graduation trip to Europe for these kids). There are political and social consequences for this: for example, graduating doctors who have accumulated a ten-thousand dollar burden are prevented from doing anything but going into a practice with the goal of getting some of that money back. They are instantly conservatized.

Society does owe its children educations. Not just university education either: technical training, job preparation, adult education, and training for working people to raise their positions, are all necessary rights, not luxuries and 'privileges'. The concept of education as a privilege is blind and elitist: it is an ideological defense for those who have the means to begin with, and it implies an unequal distribution of talent by social class.

If you hear any of this bullshit argument when you complain about your fees remember that these were the arguments once used to defend the 'need' for high school tuition. And grade school tuition.

It's January the 15th. Time to raise the call once again for universal and free education. And time to hear the call ignored.

View expressed was troika's

Sir,
It was reported in Monday's Daily that I spoke in the name of the English departments of Montreal at Loyola. I want to correct this erroneous statement since what I said at Loyola and what was released to the papers, was a statement by the three chairmen of the departments (that is, McGill, Sir George Williams and Montreal), and not by the departments themselves. This statement represents the view of the three of us as chairmen and therefore as individuals who worked closely with Professor Hooper and knew him well. I am sure both my colleagues, like myself, would regret having what we felt a personal testimony on the behalf of one of our fellow chairmen turn into a corporate activity.

Voters lacked allies

Sir:
In your article on the Senate meeting Wednesday, you stated that only one student Senator voted against barring French Canadians and others from admission next year to the class of 1973.

This is incorrect. Four students were present at Senate at the time that vote was taken. They were Peter Chinloy, Danny Luchins, Chris Portner, and myself. We all voted against this most arbitrary and short-sighted measure. However, only two professors voted with us.

Loyola...

for the students' stand on the situation at Loyola.

Close to 250 parents turned out to the meeting, held at McGill. Gifford Hooper, former Chairman of English, and Stan Russell, Vice-Chairman of English, spoke to the parents and answered their questions.

Although Father Malone, President of Loyola, Father Jack O'Brien, Vice-President Academic, and Dr. Michael Blamar, Acting Dean of Arts, were invited to the meeting, they did not attend.

Professor Hooper reviewed the situation concerning the non-renewals of the contracts, from the time when the recommendations for professors were made, in October, until Dec. 15, when the professors were informed of the non-renewals.

According to Professor Hooper, there are 200 second year students who are registered for Honours and Majors English programs, a large increase over previous years. He had recommended that five additional professors be hired and was greatly shocked when so many were not even offered contract renewals.

One of the points discussed was that two-thirds of the fired professors took an active part in protesting the dismissal of Professor S.A. Santhanam. The other third signed a petition complaining about the administration's handling of the Santhanam affair.

Give us a chance to let our hair down, too.

We're not as square as you think! Behind our seemingly straight-laced image, there throb some pretty way-out projects. And people.

Alcan is involved in many unexpected areas. Because we do a lot more than just produce aluminum. We and others try to find new uses for it.

For example, one new use that came to our attention was developed in Belgium and refined by a Montreal artist. Through a process called Aluchromie, he "paints" on specially prepared aluminum panels. The resulting work of art has a water-colour effect with unusual depth and perspective, and endless applications in art and architecture.

And that's just one of the exciting new developments in aluminum.

Alcan researchers and scientists are continually searching for better ways to do things with aluminum. And it's not always easy. Often they have to struggle for years to find ways of making their ideas come to life.

So you see, they aren't the only ones who have to cope with hairy problems.
